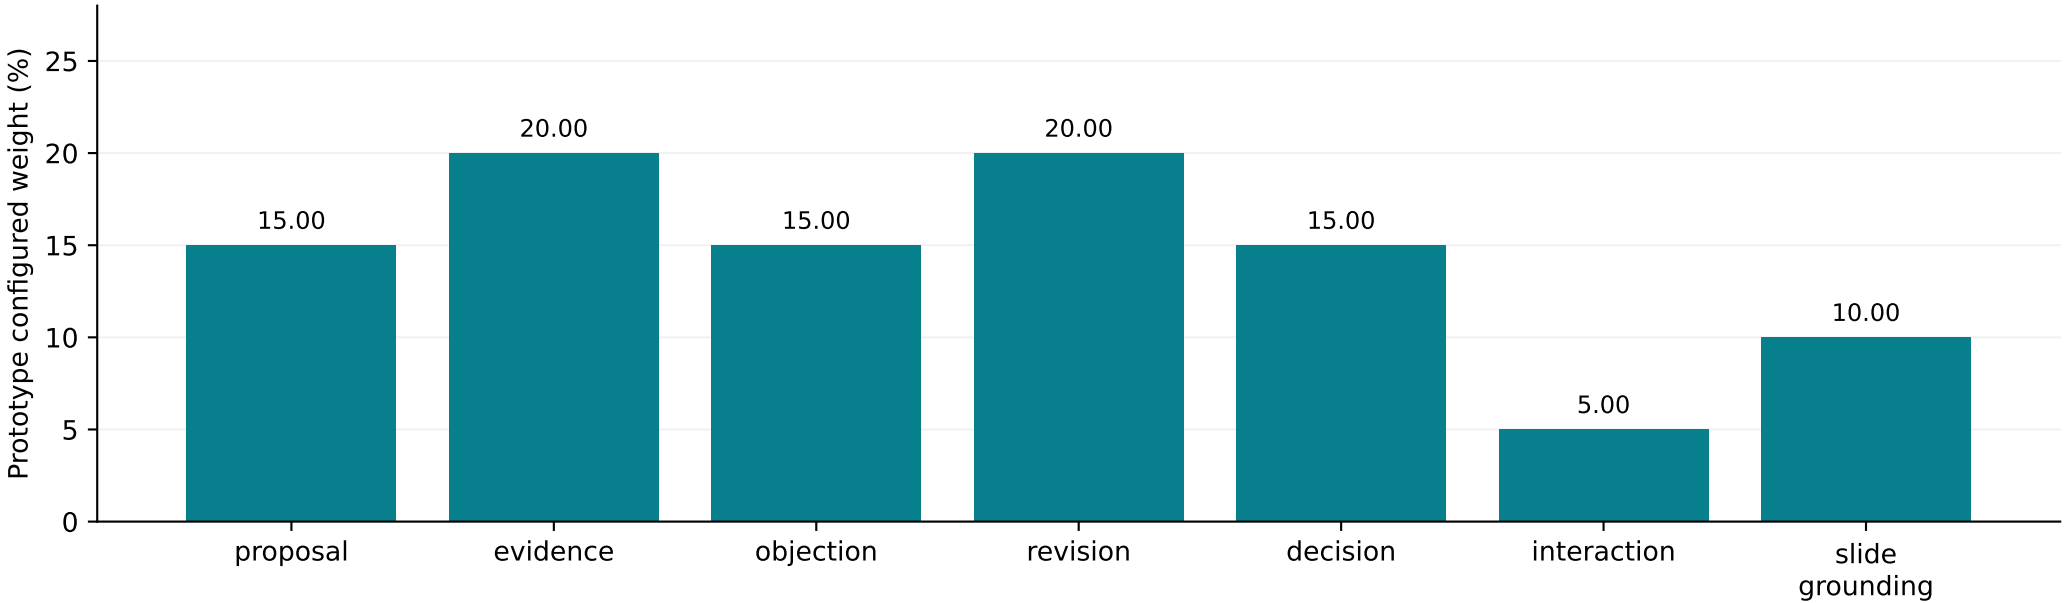
Default contribution-score weights



Configuration values, not empirically learned feature importance. Features are max-normalized across participants, then weighted. Missing categories stay zero; the highest participant score need not be one.